One Stop Displays streamlines its manufacturing services with UEMS.

CEO and President, Khaled R. Khuda, announced today that manufacturing services would require a different business development process over the coming years. To maintain this focus on developing EMS projects, OSD will need to separate display efforts and general manufacturing efforts internally. In conjunction with Display Canada, OSD's parent company, OSD has announced the intent to implement these changes. OSD's manufacturing services will be operated under Universal Electronics Manufacturing Services (UEMS).

UEMS will initially share many common resources as OSD. Display Canada will require that some essential personnel, facilities, and other resources will be initially shared between these two organizations to minimize overhead costs and streamline performance of this new company. UEMS will continue all OSD EMS projects, and in return promote OSD display products to their future EMS customers.

Mr. Khuda stated that "UEMS will start as a very strong company with current investments and inquiries, but will require the continued dedication and hard work that we have seen so far." In addition, "OSD still has a very strong industry presence for display technologies. We expect the OLED products to be our long-term investment and are gaining interest at a higher rate than expected. Our focus will continue with these products and the latest display technologies."
